About twenty-two years ago I became dissatisfied with the slow way of raising chickens with hens. I had read that chicks could be hatched by artificial incubation, but I had never seen an incubator, and knew nothing of the natural laws of incubation, but if one wants to learn they must investigate, so I went to work. I placed a thermometer under a setting hen every day for three weeks and found first the temperature at which she kept her eggs each day during the whole hatch. The hen from which I was taking lessons I set on the porch near the window, where I was doing my spring sewing. I watched her closely that I might know how many times she turned her eggs during the day. She turned them about every four hours. I did the same for a while, but soon found it was not necessary. After I had found the proper temperature at which to keep the eggs during incubation, and also how often to turn them, I commenced the construction of an incubator. I used two dry goods boxes, one of which had served me as a wood box for several years. One box was a little larger than the other. I placed the smaller one inside the larger, and filled the space with sawdust. I thought it had to be thick so it would retain the heat. That was not a bad idea, either. I made a hot air space at the...
